One Fatality.

While the American press is filled day after day with accounts of street car accidents, deaths during the year amounting to the hundreds, the remarkable statement is made by the consul at Nottingham that during the past the street car service in his district. the street car service in his district. Still further and not the less surprising information is given that the last death of this kind to be reported was in January, 1902. Since that time the cars have run through 7,250,000 miles of the city's streets and have carried $0,000,000 passengers.
